

Environment Or Occupational Health And Safety Training

The Australian and International Standards programs require that your company management systems have clear procedures for the following:

Identification of environmental or health and safety risks related to your business activities including;

- A risk based ranking for the issues identified;
- Clear objectives and targets related to the management of these risks;
- A structured process to measure company performance against these objectives and targets; and,
- A structured process to improve operational performance related to these objectives and targets.

The most significant hurdle faced by companies is the initial identification and risk assessment required to determine which activities create the risks and how important these risks are within the business operation.

QCS(E) has developed a training program centered on your requirement to manage this issue. We can teach your staff how to identify the activities that have the potential to negatively affect your environmental or health and safety performance. The training program then assists your staff to develop management programs designed to negate the risk to your employees and the environment.

QCS(E) will schedule the training course to meet your availability. Training will take place at your workplace where your staff can be taught the tools required to manage your specific environmental and/or health and safety performance rather than a generic program.

QCS(E) training courses are very competitively priced. We charge a Course Fee not a Participant Fee. In effect the one fee will cover up to 10 of your staff. This structure makes it very effective to train a number of your staff to undertake the internal audits giving you greater flexibility in the event of staff illness or other absence.

Contact QCS(E) today on (08) 8325 1471 or by email to admin@qcse.com.au to discuss your requirements. One of our friendly staff will provide you with further information and answer any questions you may have during a confidential discussion.
